Regional Youth Summit on Democracy

From September 20-October 4, 2022, the National Museum of American History will host a series of digital events for middle and high school students to critically examine the intersection of history and civics, with a particular emphasis on the connection between the portrayal of challenging history and the health and stability of the U.S. system of democracy. Through this experience, the museums nationwide will join vital national conversations about reconciliation and re-envisioning needed to strengthen the nation and keep the republic. The program will be grounded in the guiding question: How do the stories we tell about the past shape our democracy of the future?

Participants will grapple with concepts of reflective patriotism, civil disagreement, and storytelling during the 2022 event. Learning objectives will focus on developing students’ historical and civic literacy skills, including the ability to ask critical questions, identify gaps and seek counter narratives, and engage in productive discussion across divisions. Key experiences will include peer to peer discussions, interrogations of civic narratives past and present, and planning for active democratic engagement.

Each year Smithsonian Affiliates join this event as Regional Summits – amplifying the National Youth Summit program and augmenting it with related programming tied to their organization’s content and community context for local students. This year we invite Regional Summits to join us digitally to convene these deeply critical conversations with and for middle and high school students across the nation.

The September 20 Summit will include live webcasts, discussion prompts and facilitation strategies, and a scheduled time during which we invite students nationwide to participate in discussion (please note that we encourage discussions to take place both synchronously and asynchronously and at times that make sense for students and communities).

The times for the webcasts and discussions have not yet been finalized, but likely will take place with the following schedule on September 20:

- 3:00 – 3:15pm ET: opening live webcast of panel discussion
- 3:15 – 3:45pm ET: assigned time for discussion, led by teachers as a classroom activity and by Regional Summits
- 3:45 – 4:00pm ET: closing live webcast of panel discussion

What do Regional Summits do?
Regional Summits connect with their local middle and high schools and invite students to participate in the National Youth Summit by watching some or all of the opening webcast broadcast by the National Museum of American History and engaging in Regional Summit-led discussion about the history and driving question. As programming during COVID presents unprecedented challenges, we encourage Regional Summits to think creatively about how to engage students in synchronous and/or asynchronous conversation.
Regional Summits can tie their programming to their own content, as well as to the history in their own community’s history.

This year, Affiliate Organizations are invited to participate in two different ways:

1. Standard Regional Summits
   Regional Summits engage their local school communities to invite middle and high school students in critical discussions connected to the summit topic. Regional Summits receive:

   - Educational resources for preparing and leading student discussions
   - Guidance in developing your Regional Summit program
   - Promotion on NMAH and Smithsonian digital channels about your museum’s participation as a Regional Summit
   - Press release templates and social media content
   - Printed materials to distribute to local communities with limited access to internet-connected devices.

   Up to 20 Regional Summits will be selected to participate. Each selected Regional Summit will receive $1,000 to defray expenses related to the program.

2. Distribution Hubs for Printed Learning Materials (Note: no funding will be awarded for this selection)
   The 2022 Summit will feature zine-making as a tool for communication and civic action. All selected Regional Summits will be provided with a package of printed zine-making templates and curricular resources to distribute to local communities in need. An additional five Affiliate Organizations may be selected to serve as a Distribution Hub of these resources, without facilitating programming.

   Up to five Affiliate Organizations will be selected as Distribution Hubs. All materials, but no financial support, will be provided.

Affiliates serving as Regional Summits are encouraged to hold programs on September 20, 2022 but may complete programming any time before October 4. Regional Summits should include at least 10 students.
